It is positive that the wines have a unique logo, which reflects the love of the country and the wine region for Hungarians. But it is negative that the equipment is incomplete and does not suggest hospitality.

They have very good qualities of wines in case of reductive and traditional also. It has one of the most beautiful landscape in this area, moreover the winery usually organizes parties to involve younger generations. The staff was nice but too young to talk about experience.

They have a unique design that reflects the specialty of the arboretum. The qualities of wines are good quality and they have a special rosé with amazing texture. But the building is semi-finished and the staff are bound by the renovation.

While preserving the traditions of the historical wine region of Badacsony, they mainly deal with white wines, preferring the local varieties. I really liked the special their type, called 'Buda Green'. Family traditions, devotion, naturalness – I can describe them.

That was amazing that we could be behind the scenes and get to know personally the whole process and workers. If I have to say some negative, it will be the design – sometimes looks too pure and rigid like a conference congress.

In addition to elegance, every drop of this unique selection - dominated by French varieties - preserves depth, a sense of ease, the taste of sunshine, the zest of the soil and all the characteristics of the Balaton Region at the same time. The staff were highly educated and intensive. We could follow up the whole process of making wine among innovative equipment.

I think the perfect winery visit happens among small groups to experience empirically. Meeting with the main winemaker and tasting in real area, visiting the cellar and follow up the states of process.
