

Positive: This Wienviertel winery provided us with a very detailed and professional tour of the cellar followed by a tasting. We were able to taste all the sparkling wines from a well-selected list and talk thoroughly about their tasting notes and even pair them with cheese offered by the vintner himself.

Negative: The cellar was a bit cold and because of the structure of the tasting room the sound wasn't that good.

The sparkling wines specialist provided us with an unforgettable and special experience which I would recommend to everyone. The combination of his hospitality and professionalism made our visit unforgettable and kept us talking about it for weeks. The high-quality sparkling wine the vintner produces is a clear indicator of his dedication, ambition, and experience. For me, this small winery located in Wineviertel is one of those hidden gems that offer this bit of uniqueness every wine enthusiast looks for.

Positive: This winery offered us a very enjoyable tasting in a state-of-the-art facility. It is located on a small hill from where visitors can enjoy the full beauty of the Wagram region. We got to know a lot about their way of production, wine style and philosophy. As it is a family-owned business, they put a lot of value on tradition.

Negative: The tasting was only in German which made the experience very hard to enjoy for English speaking members of our group.

We were greeted by a friendly member of the staff that immediately started organizing a tasting for us. We felt well taken care of in the time while we were waiting for the tasting to begin. The tasting was done very professionally although the lady doing it mentioned she isn't feeling well due to her sickness. For me, this was a clear indicator of their work ethic and dedication to their clients. Despite it was only in German the experience was very enjoyable for everyone as we could translate everything to our friends and keep them in the conversations.

Positive: The quality and the price of the wines were very good. We were able to pay per glass and choose directly which wine we wish to try.

Negative: The language was a huge barrier as no one was able to provide us with an adequate tasting. The people wouldn't engage a conversation with us as they were just unable to communicate with us.

Overall the experience in the Czech Republic wasn't very pleasant and enjoyable. We struggled to find a winery that would organize a tasting. The only place where we could taste some of the local wines didn't provide us with any explanation about them or the region. This was due to the factor that the woman leading the tasting was the secretary as she was the only one with at least basic English skills.

It's very hard to describe a perfect wine visit because after all, it's a matter of taste and preferences. Some people put more value on the quality of the wines, others on the price and for some, the whole experience is more important than the product. For me, the human factor plays a big role. The person leading the tasting can make the difference between an enjoyable experience and a total disaster. Having a well-informed, professional and charming presenter isn't easy but after all, he is the face of your product and builds the first relationship with the potential clients. Wineries should put more effort into educating and recruiting young people who will, later on, sell their product with passion and success. After all the future belongs to the young and investing in them will most definitely have a positive impact on your winery for years to come.
